CIO Partners of Atlanta Partners with Non-Profit March of Dimes

ATLANTA, Feb 27th, 2004/CIONewswire/ -- CIO Partners of Atlanta (CIOPOA), a nationally-focused IT staffing and executive placement firm recently offered its services pro-bono to the March of Dimes organization in its search for a Southern Regional IT Director.

The March of Dimes, an international non-profit organization that supports research and education on the prevention of birth defects, required a high level manager with significant technical and leadership skills. CIOPOA conducted a nationwide search and utilized its innovative CIOPOA RightHire process to identify and place this senior resource, offering its standard fee as a donation to the organization.

Jo Campbell, Vice President of the March of Dimes' Southern Region commented "the effort CIO Partners of Atlanta put into helping us identify just the right person was evident and we are very appreciative of their professionalism and generosity to our mission".

CIOPOA President and Managing Partner, H. Michael Burgett adds "Our team was extremely proud to partner with such an outstanding organization as the March of Dimes. We believe strongly that our continued growth brings with it a social responsibility to give back to our community".

CIO Partners of Atlanta (CIOPOA), a leading technology and executive staffing firm, is differentiated by its innovative CIOPOA RightHire process and its dedication to the development of long term client partnerships. CIOPOA supports the missions of non-profit organizations, including the March of Dimes, through various channels. Additional information on CIO Partners can be found at www.ciopoa.com.
